

1. Answer: c. Conventional and acting

Explanation: These concepts are two of the four types of crowds identified by Ralph Turner and Lewis Killian.

2. Answer: c. Denomination

Explanation: Denomination is a type of religious organization while the first two concepts are not related to religion.

3. Answer: c. Habitualization and institutionalization

Explanation: Habitualization and institutionalization are concepts used to describe how social structures and institutions in a society are developed over time. These concepts are not very much helpful compared to the first two groups in the choices.

4. Answer: c. Labeling theory

Explanation: Convergence and emergent-norm theory attempt to explain people's behavior in crowds whereas labeling theory focuses on deviant behaviors and asserts that these actions are considered as such because of how society labels them.

5. Answer: a. Symbolic interactionism

Explanation: Symbolic interactionism focuses on human actions and patterns across individual behaviors. It makes use of verstehen to understand human actions and the meanings they attribute toward a situation.